

USELESS LANGUAGES.

The taxpayers of Sacramento, Cal., are protesting vigorously against the numerous useless branches taught in their common schools. They claim that the curriculum is crowded overmuch now with fables and unnecessary furbelows, and that a systematic weeding out should be inaugurated, and no further ornamental extras be added. The public schools, they claim, should be nurseries of good English education, and to that end it is necessary that the course of studies be limited and not enlarged—Bea.

There is sound sense in the above and what is true of a public school in California, is true in Nevada.

The taxpayers of this State are paying taxes to maintain Latin and Greek Professors in the University and for this reason other studies, much more useful are neglected. The studies of Electricity, Geology, Agriculture and the mechanic arts are of ten fold more use to a Nevada boy than putting in his time delving in the declension of Latin nouns or grubbing for Greek roots. A man who can tell a mineral vein when he sees the croppings, is of more use to this community than a man who can translate dead languages. Life is too short on the wind up of the 19th century to resurrect the language of dead and buried races.

RESUMPTION OF FREE COINAGE.

It is intimated at Washington that the New Orleans mint, which has been closed for about three months, will be reopened and the coinage of silver dollars resumed. It is said that the Secretary of the Treasury will direct that 33,000,000 silver dollars be coined, as there were 29,000,000 of those dollars in the Treasury when the present administration came into power which was held for the redemption of Treasury notes. Over 16,000,000 of these dollars have since been paid out for that purpose and the notes redeemed destroyed, while the notes redeemed with gold reissued. The Secretary proposes to leave the Treasury at the end of the administration in practically the same condition that he found it, so far as silver is concerned.

It is not authoritatively stated that the Secretary will coin 33,000,000 silver dollars. That would be too much of a concession to the silver element, but the profit on the coinage would be several million dollars and that would make a better showing for Secretary Carlisle.

The Local Paper.

Assist your local papers in their efforts to disseminate information concerning the resources of the country, says Jim Townsend in the Bodie Index. Do not be small about it. Don't run away with the absurd notion that when you pay a newspaper a little money for services rendered you are doing an act of charity or that the money expended has irretrievably "gone up the flume." If you entertain this fallacy you are away off your commercial and social nut. The local newspaper is a lever that moves a great deal sometimes. When a man has no immediate use for it he is apt to speak slightly of it but when he has an ax to grind he suddenly changes his tune and is disposed to hob nob with the editor and propitiate the devil. The newspaper does a vast amount of work for which it is never paid, and many a little favor is granted which is not adequately appreciated. Anxiety to get something in the local paper is not infrequently exceeded by the desire to keep something out. On such occasions the paper is deemed to have an influence and the editor worth cuzzing up to.

A Fine Showing.

Upwards of $400,000 has been expended on development on the Jim Crow and Monitor, and in the erection of the milling plant the development of water with which to operate it involving about half of that sum, says the DeLamar Echo. Nearly 10,000 tons have been put through the mill, however from which $500,000 has been derived, while with additional stamps that are now being shipped from the East the earnings in 1896 will far exceed those of any period since the purchase of the property by its present owner. Every improvement is to be found on the property, the ore being conveyed from the mines to the mills by a tramway, while a coach with three guards is employed to deliver the bullion product at Millford, a distance of 140 miles.

It will be a long time before Nevada has another such chance for mining development as was offered by Lane & Company.
